Solicitor Dorsey shortly before noon made public a mass of sffidavits upholding Jurors Johenning and Henslee who were ac-cused of bias in charges filed by the defense in the fight for a new trial for Lee Frank.

trial for Leo Frank.

The affidavits included statements from fellow jurors declaring that the two men had expressed no opinion on the merits of the case while the trial was in progress. They also included statements uphoding the character of the men.

ments upholding the character of the men.

That the Fulton County Grand Jury will be asked to investigate the origin of the accusation of Ira W. Fisher was the statement made by G. J. Graham, attorney for J. G. Shirley, the furniture dealer named by the new Phagan "witness" Tuesday.

This action was decided upon following a lengthy conference between Shirley, Graham and Ohief of Detectives Lanford. Its purpose will be to determine whether Fisher's story was the result of a conspiracy against Shirley or simply the result of a drink-crazed mind.

of a conspiracy against Shiriey or samply are created mind.

A rigid probe to the foundation of the story will be asked.

Persons named by Fisher as his associates since his departure from Atlanta will be questioned, especially those with whom he had dealings just prior to the time he appeared before Chief Pelice Bodeker in Birmingham and made his startling statements.

If the investigation shows that others had a hand in the accusations against the furniture dealer, they will be prosecuted together with Fisher on a conspiracy charge. Many believe that this well rower the fact.

gether with Pisher on a conspiracy charge. Many believe that this will prove the fact.

Conference With Dorsey

Attorney Graham stated that he would have a conference with Solicitor Dorsey later in the day and an early date for the Grand Jury probe would be fixed.

Two Atlanta men and one Birmingham man are threatened with arrest on charges of conspiracy. A searching investigation by Chief Lanford and Attorney Graham will decide whether this more will be taken. Graham said Theeday that he would make a decision as soon as reports had been made to him on certain rumors that had come to his ears.

Shirley said that he either would put Fisher in the asylum or in the pentlentiary. He will bring his books to the police Tuesday to show a complete alibi. Lanford has instituted an investigation of the charges of conspiracy and will make arrests at once if he finds them substantisted. Two of the men named in the alleged conspiracy have been identified with the Frank case. The other one is known to have been with Fisher in Birmingham.

It was pointed out by Chief lanford Tuesday that were Fisher's story true in every particular, there is nothing in it too ment of the police with the wast of the police astation storing and the them was taken out in the police has the police station on the charge of conspiracy and will be chiefe office. CHAMBERLIN-JOHNSON-DUBOSE CO. ATLANTA--NEW YORK--PARIS CHAMBERLIN-JOHNSON-DUBOSE CO.

We Drive a Nail and Hang a Fact on It

We are just entering the busiest season of the whole year—which is another way of saying that the time of the year has come when the good people in and about Atlanta are going to spend large sums for their own furnishings and for their homes, larger perhaps than in many years.

It is well to stop a moment and consider how and where YOU are going to spend YOUR money.

The finances of the country are in a healthy condition, things are "looking up" throughout America.

In this section of the South they are "looking up" very high.

This means that manufacturers are taxed to meet the great demands of a great nation able and out to buy whatever it wants.

For we do not think any one will deny that these are the present day conditions.

And when conditions are such then are merchants put to Right merchandise is hard to get at right prices.

It is the old principle of supply and demand still working away as old principles have a habit of doing.

This is the sharp pointed nail that is easy to drive.

And yet we hear much right now about bargains, about tre mendous savings, about cut prices, about great sales.

How is it possible?

Here we are working away with a vengeance, striving with all the means that this long established organization has acquired, to gather into our store merchandise that measures up to our standard of what it ought to be for the price.

It is taking all our time, all our energy, all our ingenuity to

And the markets of the world are open to us.

And we have never yet failed to prove to Atlanta that we were alive to every opportunity—that presented itself.

To Exhibit at Fair

And we are rather happily reputationed for giving genuine bargains in our sales which come just as often as we can work them out truthfully and genuinely—but no oftener.

Now let's hang up a fact.

We will not be tempted in this sudden rush of busy-ness to forget the principles that underlie the Chamberlin-Johnson-Du-Bose Company way of doing things. As long as our efforts are centered on getting worthy merchandise for a fair price, we will not claim that we can sell worthy merchandise underprice.

But we do say that we have succeeded most admirably this season in putting several lung and solid stones in the structure of public confidence that we have been building up here in Atlanta these many, many years. We have gathered stocks that we are proud of—friend-making stocks that stand the one hundred cents to the dollar test. the dollar test.

And it is in this spirit that we invite you to our store; invite you to make comparisons, to use your own judgment, to decide for yourself whether these one hundred cents to the dollar values are or are not better than the one hundred twenty-five cents to the dollar "bargains" that you have spread before you so boldly.

We are full of confidence—it is an effect. We have been put to the test. We have succeeded, succeeded this season better than we ever have (the shades of many fine years pass before us as we write). It is rather remarkable what a good, strong fight as we write). I will accomplish

The Suits

Our advertisement this morning concerned suits at $25.00.

They are the result of specialization.

So are the suits at $32.50, $35.00, $45.00, so are all the suits here.

And there are many.

Such a store as this owes its best service to every customer.

And every customer gets it whatever she wishes to pay for her suit.

Suppose you now just look into this for your own satisfaction and see if these words about specialization do not fit in with the suit we show (or the coat or dress or fur) at the price you wish to pay.

pay. Test this out. The Millinery

No store in the South—very few in America outside of New York—has the millinery organization that we have. Through our connection with Estelle Mershon, 20 East 46th street, New York, the styles that bloom in Paris one week are in Atlanta a few days after the next week and, happily, at Atlanta prices.

Test this out.

The Waists

Never have waist styles come in for quite so much interest as they have this season.
The Oriental influence has done wonders.
Waists are rich, glorious affairs right nower they are an impossible mixture of colors mas querading as Oriental.
The difference lies between the work of the artist and the near-artist.
But the proverbial good taste of Atlanta women will distinguish.
And we leave this waist store as we present it this season to her good taste.
Test this out.

The Blankets

they are!

We reason along these lines about blankets after getting as fine values as are to be got (at every price) why should we practice any other method than to tell our ensistence what is in this blanket and what is in that blanket? A contrary course would not change matters in the least. And as we have every confidence in the genuine worth of every pair of blankets we own, we are willing to have them judged by what we say they are.

A Good Store to Depend On

Dependable, as applied t simple honesty.
It has much to do with to stores, is full of more meaning than one-would think at first glance.
It means more than jusability, organization, power

Women look to such a store as this to show them the Style is a very concrete abstract "something"—no need to tell how important a part it plays in Women's (and Men's) wear. For a store, to be dependable, its merchandise must not only be of right quality, but also of right style.

We want you to test out how truthfully we can tack the adjective dependable to this store.

We are so full of confidence in our stocks, in the merchandise that we have to offer right now, that we seek no other method of gaining your patronage than the convincing arguments that the merchandise itself presents. See it!

REVIEW OF COTTON MARKET

With the exception of Wednesday, when January broke to 12,66 the low point of the recent bear campaign, this has been the most propitious week for the built element since the season start has been the most propitious week for his built element since the season start has been the most propitious week for his built element since the season start has been dependent of the market, and the property of the most sensition area, and a start of the market, alied and abetted by a strong market in Liverpool and unfavorable weather over the larger portion of the cotton area, and a start of the control of the cotton area, and a start of the control of the cotton area, and a start of the cotton area, and the start of the cotton area, the cotton area and the start of the start of the cotton area, the start of the sta

Some think the rise has been too rapid, but those inclined to that belief do not hesitatic and think of the probable damage the eastern crops will sustain from frest. It is already a well-posted fact that the staple this season, where the crops have been in excellent shape up until a week ago, where the crops have been in excellent shape up until a week ago, when advices began to froud the martet to the effect that the crops have been overestimated. Some estimated Georgia's crop at 2.759,600 bales, provinced killing frost belief off until after a frout prevails. Now that we have had soaking rains, followed by freezing weather and heavy frost in certain sections, it would be only natural to say that estimates surpassing the 1311 yield are not worth considering. It would also be well to note that the world's requirements for the staple will approximately total 1.640,600 bales, we would be completed to the fact that January a year ago was selling around 19.24, or nearly 3½c cheaper than to-day's close, when estimates of the crop were not in excess of 14,000,000 bales. Many conservative traders think that this year's yield will exceed the above flags attained to the fact that the into-day's close, when estimates of the crop were not in excess of 14,000,000 bales. Many conservative traders think that this year's yield will exceed the above flags the extraordinarily large exports that kept the visible supply 400,000 bales under that of a year ago. Thus far exports are nearly 20,000 bales larger than the previous year. Should they continue that large during the movement, only a large crop were saffled for the domain.

The advance in the cotton market is being closely followed in the goods market, in face of the fact that prevent prices on staple goods are due to credence.

Scoretary Hester's week-read figures were interpreted bullishly; 651,000 bales were brought to light, of which spinners absorbed 317,000 bales, the increase in the world's visible supply of American cotton being 324,000 bales, as against 350,000 last year and 353,000 in 1911.

COTTON GOSSIP

Schill sold about 50,000 bales un call, which was bought by Weld and McFadden.

Bulls are more confident now than ever that the supply and demand, compared with crop prospects, justifies present prices, and even higher.

On the other hand, a bear puts the case in this way: "It might be well for those whose knowledge of the actual cotton is very limited to think a bit before the control of the

"Yes, I Guess It Killed Him," Said the Lady, and It Did

The train was rushing to Chicago, a solid mass of steel, flying like a steel arrow with its living cargo from one great center to another. It "touched a man" standing by the track.

A thin trail of smoke drifted behind, losing itself in the many colored leaves of the trees along the river bank. It was a beautiful day, the dull grayish-blue clouds reflected in the water, as the late afternoon sun finished a day's work.

And it was a beautiful world, to the man whose life went out as suddenly as the light of a candle, as the big train came around the curve

Such a little incident in life and in railroading does not cause much delay. The emergency brakes were set, but there was no shock—no passengers, except a few on the rear observation platform, knew that anything had happened.

One young man, on the right-hand side of that platform, as you look toward the engine, turned white, for he had seen it as it lay in the trench between the track and the hill, when the train flew past.

He and half a dozen others, the youngest men on the train, ran back with the railroad man, who was sent formally to do what is customary.

In about three minutes, as fast as they could run, and out of breath, they and the railroad man returned, and with them a brakeman, who had carried a red flag, to prevent a rear-end collision.

They came running, hurrying, climbing to the observation platform, and the train was off—she soon made up the three or four minutes lost. She had done exactly the same thing two weeks before

The pale young man who had seen it soon recovered his nerve, and no one was excited except the very small boy who had rapidly exhausted all of the comic newspapers in the observation car, and was much in need of fresh excitement. He could find no one to pay attention to him, except a lady who evidently does a good deal of traveling on this train.

She said to the little boy: "Yes, I guess he is dead all right. I never knew this train to touch a man and not kill him. You see, it goes pretty fast."

Some one had said that the train had not run over the man, but had "just touched him," and the little boy thought that perhaps he was not dead.

But he was dead, as dead as any little ant that you have crushed, walking along the garden path. It was not the rail-road's fault, not the engineer's fault; he had blown his whistle; and the section hand—the dead man was a "section hand"—knew the whistle meant death if he stayed too near the track. Custom makes us scorn danger.

This "hand" had not thought it worth while to cross all the tracks and clear the flying "Century." He put his back against the steep bank, leaving room, as he thought. But air suction, caused by the flying train, or his own recklessness, brought him too near. Employees are supposed to pretend ignorance of all accidents. But one employee told the short story to this writer, whom he knew: "The steam cylinder head just touched him and it took his head clean off, as though it had been cut with a knife."

Here, if you choose, you have a chance to moralize on life, its significance, and on man, the little leaf growing on a tree we call the human race, falling and vanishing like any other leaf.

It is not the man, but the race that counts.

It is the race that built the great train, the intelligence of the race that has just united the Atlantic Ocean and the Pacific Ocean

It is the race, the millions working together, that gradually make the life of the man worth while, the importance of the individual greater.

The race is the real SUPERMAN, the real power. And each individual "section hand," forgotten the hour that he dies, or "great man," forgotten when the newspapers stop talking about him, must find his comfort in the fact that he belongs TO THE RACE, shares in its accomplishment, helps in its work, and will probably return to this planet over and over millions of times, as long as the planet lives, move on to work in some other bigger and better planet when this one dies—and so on forever.

P. S.—For the serious mind. Note that the flying train typifies modern industry and civilization. No one on the train was excited—a majority did not know that anything had happened. Promptly on the hour each ate his dinner and all slept well. The train had killed a man. BUT IT WAS NOBODY'S BUSINESS.

It was not the engineer's fault; he had done his duty.

It was not the passengers' fault; they did not run the train. It was not the railroad's fault; it laid down rules.

It was nobody's FAULT; but the man WAS DEAD.

If any INDIVIDUAL PASSENGER had killed the man that passenger would have refused to leave the body, would have inquired for the wife and children, would have felt remorse, lost appetite, blamed himself, even had the dead man been really to blame.

But as the passengers, the train, the engineer and the railroad ALL COMBINED killed him, NO ONE felt responsible.

So it is in industry and civilization

Ten men are killed in a day in some mine. No one responsible. Stockholders, managers, engineers all say, "I did not do it"—again, NO ONE TO BLAME.

A miserable woman starves to death in her garret in a big city. Civilization says, "I did not do it." No one to blame, and so it goes.

We shiver with horror when we read of an individual bodyowned slave beaten to death.

We shrug our shoulders and say, "I did not do it," when we read of ten thousand wage-owned slaves, miserably paid girls, driven to despair, by poverty.

Since we have evaded personal responsibility we must devise COLLECTIVE RESPONSIBILITY so that when men die in their youth and women starve it shall not be possible for the entire race and its government to say, "I did not do it."

The Value of Good Character---An Incident and a Lesson

The recent commutation of the death sentence of George Olier, a negro convicted of murder in DeKalb County, is a matter of more than passing importance.

In that commutation Governor Slaton has succeeded in writing a lesson that everybody may profit by considering.

It is a simple, old lesson as old as the hills—but it has not yet been learned by all men!

Oliver, a negro of previous good character, killed, upon the impulse of the moment, another negro. Oliver was not himself at the moment of the crime, but the cold record of the trial made out a case of murder, pure and simple, and the jury found accordingly.

The case was not appealed to the Supreme Court, for there was no apparent error of law therein, but an appeal direct to the Governor for elemency was made.

Presenting the plea were a hundred or so of the white acquaintances—the neighbors—of the negro under sentence of death. The white jury that convicted him asked the Governor's mercy—and every plea was based upon one isolated proposition, PREVIOUS GOOD CHARACTER OF LONG STANDING!

In commuting the death sentence, Governor Slaton said:

"The negro is a charge upon the conscience and thought of the Southern white men. Among them he finds his best friends, and all that is demanded of him is good behavior and a recognition of his position. What a dramatic emphasis is placed upon the value of good character by this appeal for clemency by stern, law-enforcing men, whom neither money nor power could influence!

"They say the defendant was hardworking, law-abiding, peace-loving, obedient, and they pleaded a life of good conduct as against the impulse of a moment that menaces him with the gallows.

"The lesson, if heeded by his color, may produce an infinitely better result than the execution of the stern sentence of the law."

The value of good character!

It should avail a man much in his hour of peril—a negro man not less than a white man.

Capital punishment is abhorrent to many people in any event; it would be doubly abhorrent in a case like that of Oliver!

Governor Slaton has turned an act of executive duty to a commendable purpose!
